1. A. Arthur Gibblets was a deep sea diver who wrote on his slate with a waterproof crayon, "Help! I'm at 20,000 leagues and my air is running out!"

2. B. Me - I wrote it in a notebook when I was making up these questions! Wake up at the back! I didn't ask who wrote a play called "Romeo and Juliet!"

3. None. Pick pockets would have been right, but there's just one teeny-weenie little catch. Anyone who knows anything about the works of Charles Dickens will have spotted that Nicholas Nickleby was a character from another book.

4. B. Yes, they both have names that "ring a bell!" Ha, Ha, Ha, I like that one!

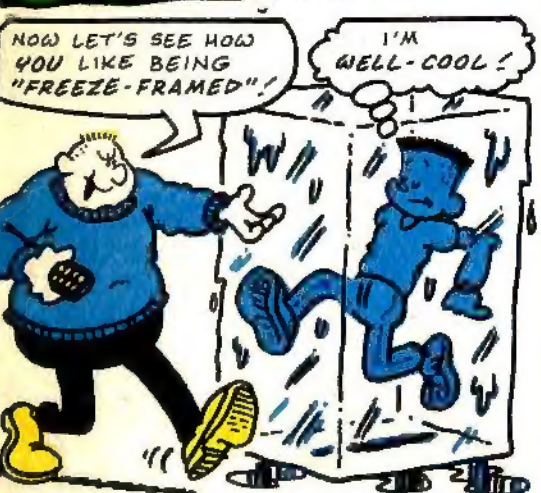

5. C. No doubt about it. No matter how many laps Long John Silver had to go, he'd still be "on his last leg!"

6. D. Right on! The book was about rabbits, it was called "Watership Down", and it was advertised on a butcher's shop with the slogan: "You've read the book. You've seen the film. Now eat the character!"

 ~♪~ THE WRINKLIES, THEY'VE GOT ALL THE POWER ~ THEY WANNA RULE US EVERY HOUR!! ♪~

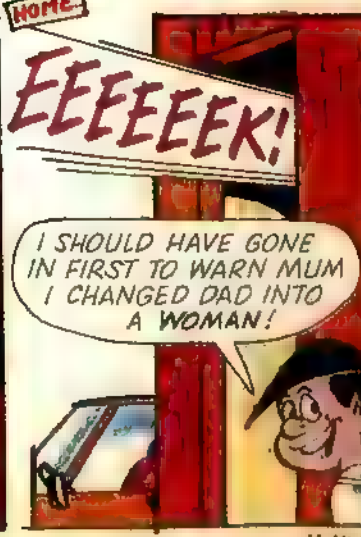

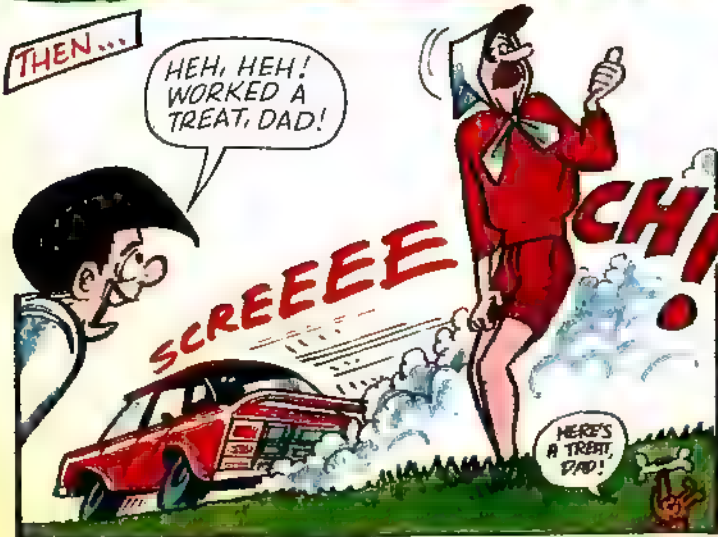

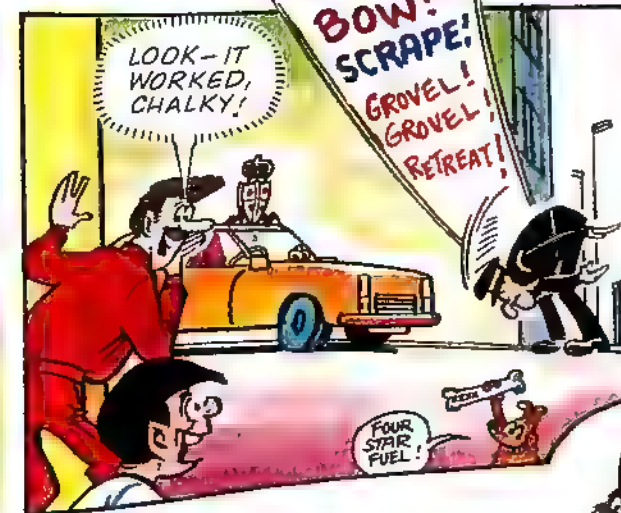

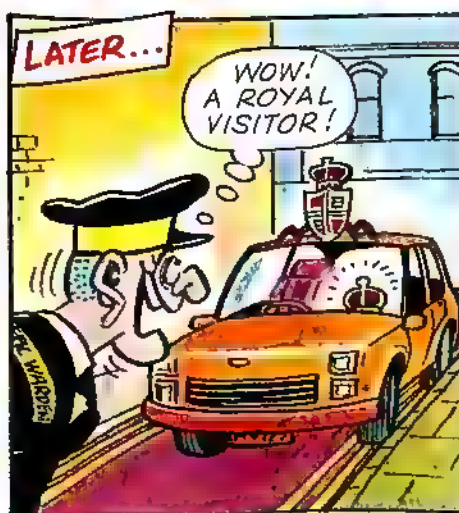

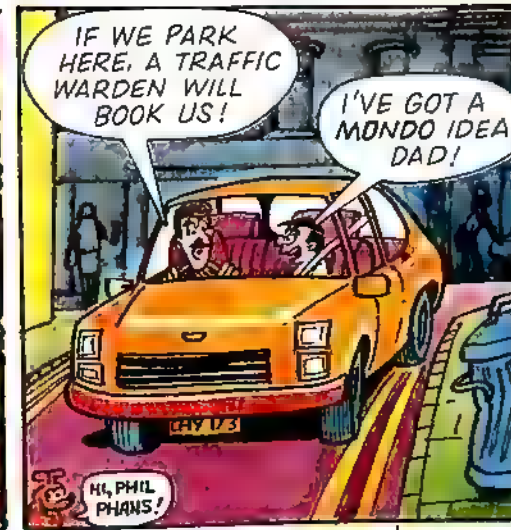

Parents, they think they've got more sense,
 They think if you're a kid you must be dense,
 I wasn't born to mow the lawn,
 I like living on the edge - I don't wanna cut no hedge.
 They don't like me wearing jeans,
 Keep telling me to eat my greens,
 Comb my hair, sit up straight in that chair.
 It just ain't fair.
 Orders, orders... always giving orders - orders, orders...
 Always giving orders.

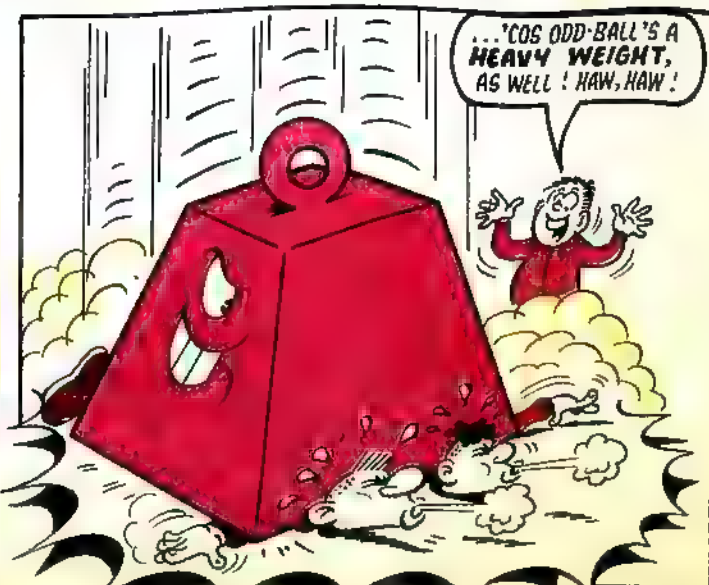

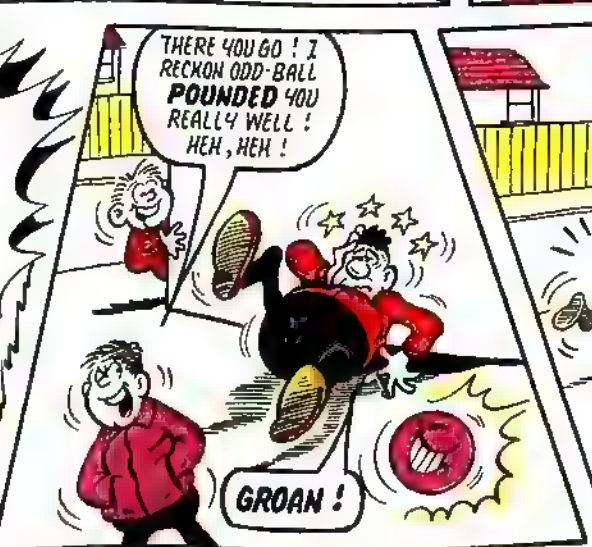

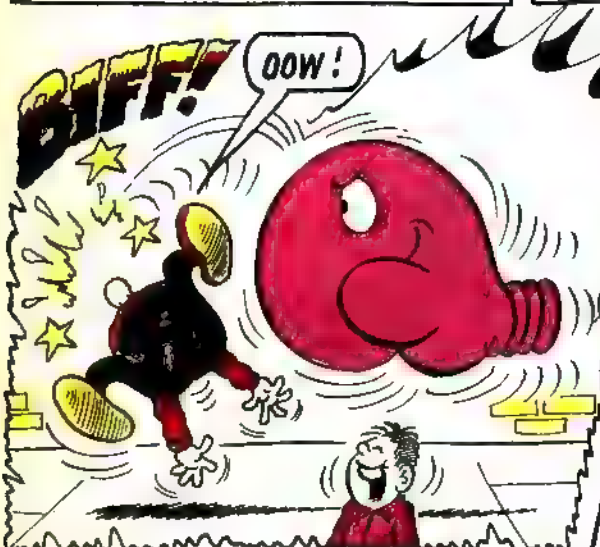

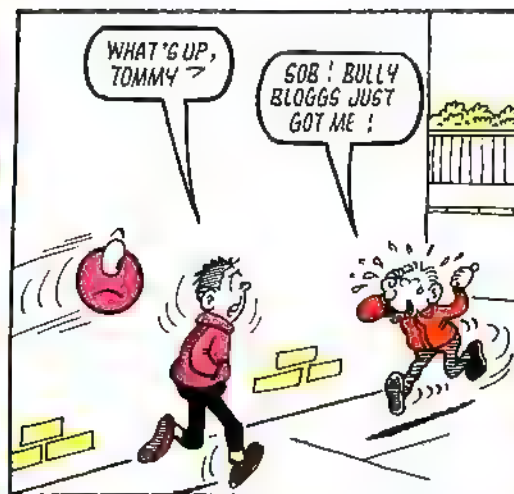

Don't get all dirty, and be in by 8.30,
 Go to school, obey the rule, don't act the fool,
 Don't pick your nose,
 And don't forget to wash between your toes.
 Use your knife and fork, don't talk,
 Mind your manners when you're eating,
 If I did that when I was young,
 I would have got a beating.
 Orders, orders... always giving orders - orders, orders...
 Always giving orders.

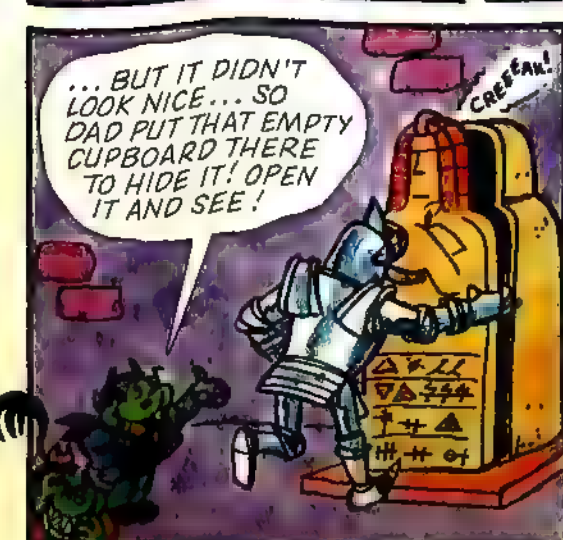

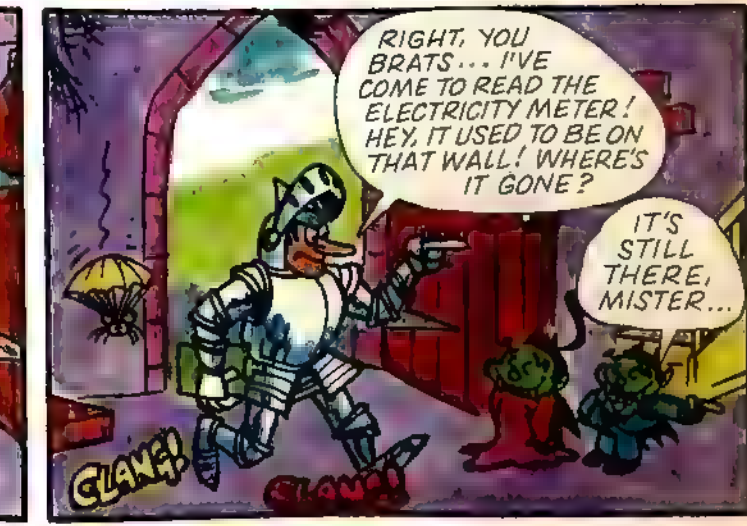

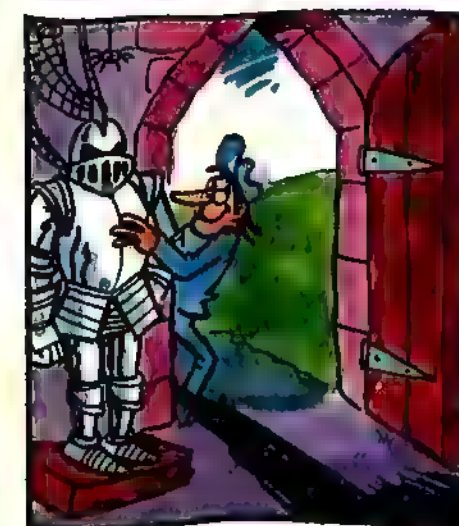

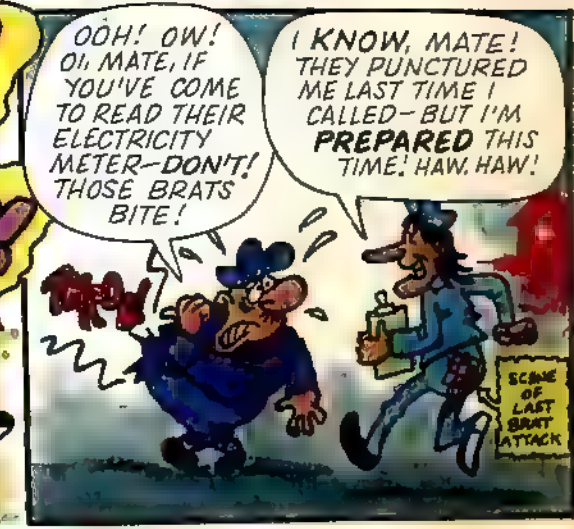

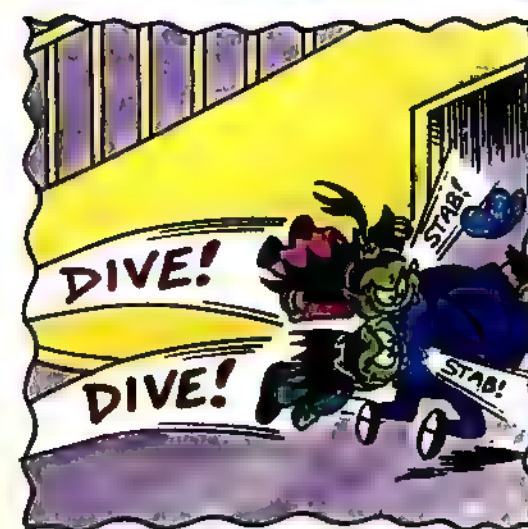

Don't fight, don't stay out all night,
 Don't make a noise, pick up those toys,
 Don't get into trouble playing with those boys.
 Be polite, you know it's right,
 Don't burst that paper bag and give your gran a fright,
 Life is just a trap,
 One day I'll have kids and they'll be singing ME this rap.
 Orders, orders, I like giving orders... orders, orders,
 I like giving orders.
